Patients and their partners may have concerns about sexual relations/hips following hip surgery. This information should help.

The vast majority of patients are able to resume safe and enjoyable intercourse after hip replacement. In fact, patients who, in the past, have had impaired sexual function caused by preoperative hip pain and stiffness usually find that, after surgery, their hips are pain-free and have better motion. However, after getting new hip(s), it may take several weeks to become completely comfortable during intercourse.

In general, it is safe to resume intercourse approximately four to six weeks after surgery. This allows time for the incision and muscles around your hip to heal.

Total hip replacement precautions need to be observed during all activities of daily living, including sexual intercourse. You should avoid excessive hip flexion, adduction and internal rotation. Think about how the precautions relate to your traditional position(s) for intercourse, and then, whether you may need to vary your position(s).

Good communication between you and your partner is essential, because you may have to adopt new position(s) for intercourse. We suggest that you share this information with your partner. In addition, you can discuss the precaution related to hip movement which have been taught to you by the staff.

We hope that, by reading this information, some of your concerns and questions dealing with sexual relations after hip replacement surgery will be answered. If you still have questions, please feel free to ask your surgeon, physical therapist, or nurse.
